Women MSME Export Opportunities under IA-CEPA Short Course

Course background and objectives

This course aims to improve participants' understanding of the opportunities for MSMEs for exporting their goods and services, using free trade agreements (such as IA-CEPA, RCEP, AANZFTA) and utilising programs such as Katalis, to build and improve their businesses. It will help participants plan for and navigate the challenges of serving export markets and finding appropriate partners in target countries. The course helps companies improve their digital readiness to support expansion to Australia.

There are opportunities to link this course with DFAT's First Nations trade agenda and facilitate knowledge sharing that could also result in future commercial partnerships.

By linking business leaders in the two countries, the course will create opportunities for MSMEs to access existing Australian expertise and share experiences and strategies for enhanced market integration and growth.

The target is women entrepreneurs across Indonesia as they face greater barriers than men, including limited access to capital, technology, and market information. Beyond technical business constraints, social and structural barriers also present additional challenges. For example, caregiving responsibilities often place a disproportionate burden on women, reducing the time available for managing and growing their businesses. One or two representatives from the Ministry of MSMEs, the Ministry of Trade and the Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection will be invited to join the course regardless of their gender, to help support development of their own MSME export support programs.

Learning Objectives

The course will focus on the following learning objectives - the course will equip the participants to:

- explore ways businesses can better engage and integrate with the Australian market and share experiences and strategies for expansion, including through understanding the support that both Australian and Indonesian Governments are able to provide
- analyse opportunities for partnerships and increased two-way trade in line with the Indonesia-Australia Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement (IA-CEPA) and other relevant trade agreements (AANZFTA, RCEP, etc)
- identify strategies to overcome challenges faced by women-led MSMEs
- understand the influence of terms of access to own business (tariffs, duties, levies, surcharges, taxes, quotas, customs requirements, standards and regulations), discuss the reasons why these conditions exist and identify what they mean for the participating businesses (export documentation and requirements)

- analyse the company, products, competition, customers and target markets – analyse forces that affect international business using PESTLE (Political, Economic, Social, Technological, Legal and Environmental); analyse company analysis using SWOT; analyse markets through five forces (existing competitors, suppliers, substitutes, new entrants and buyers); discuss business model canvas and other analysis tools
- further develop existing business and marketing plans (analyses – see above; strategies: segmentation/targeting/positioning, entry mode; operational plans including international product decisions, pricing, supply chains (incl. online sales, supply chain management in crisis i.e. Middle East War), freight and transport, product adaptation to different markets, USP, marketing communications including promotion, branding, monitoring, and budgeting)
- identify ways digitalisation can open new areas of engagement between Australia and Indonesia and further enhance participants' digital skills to engage with export markets; optimise the use of technology including online platforms to foster business linkages; enhance product design/manufacturing; track consumer demand and optimise value chains
- identify how to access finance and capital for international growth (as well as Australian Government programs such as Katalis)
- understand the role cultures play in international business and develop networks between individuals and organisations in Indonesia and Australia to further enhance collaboration and sharing of ideas
- learn from the experiences of, and connect with First Nations-led MSMEs

The course provider is expected to produce materials and training that can be communicated by participants at later stages to wider audiences in Indonesia. To achieve the above-mentioned learning outcomes, the proposed course offers a structured learning process by applying a range of learning methodologies:

- Classroom sessions
- Case studies
- Site visits
- Discussion and planning sessions
- Simulations and role plays
- Networking events. The course provider may engage Australian VET providers to enable follow-up on remaining sub-topics for participants who wish to deepen their learning—for example, in business strategy and digital marketing.
- Additionally, the course participants will develop an Award Project, an individual or a small group project. The applicants identify a topic for the project as part of their applications. The course participants present the project plan at the pre-course workshop, further develop the project during the course in Australia and present the implemented project (rationale, objectives, steps, challenges, outcomes and next steps) at the post-course workshop. The post-course may include concrete actions to actively implement exports to Australia.
